Students of various ages and nationalities are hard at work on their studies.

Everyone is a classmate, from their teens to their 90s.
Students are those who have not had sufficient opportunities to obtain a compulsory education.

There are a number of students who attend school while working during the day.
Motivation for enrolling includes feelings of wanting to “improve academic ability” or “learn how to read and write.”
Three-quarters of graduates go on to high school or get jobs.

“Survey on Evening Classes at Public Junior High School,” Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology (as of May 2014)

Currently, there are 31 evening classes at public junior high schools in eight prefectures.
The Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology is promoting the establishment of at least one school in each prefecture by offering a variety of support.

*“Evening classes at public junior high schools” refers to classes that offer courses in the evenings at junior high schools established by municipalities.

What can be learned through studies?

We did an activity in class on answering the question. “What music or movies have changed you?” I chose “My Ballad,” which we sang in music class. I always think of my fellow students at evening school when I sing these lyrics: “Even if your heart aches, no matter if you have been distressed, we are here for you. We are always looking out for you. We will help one another and live together forever.”

During a period of integrated study, we participated in a tea ceremony. It was very interesting. The tea was delicious, and we also were able to learn about koto, a traditional musical instrument of Japan. The teacher also performed a traditional Japanese dance. For foreign students, this type of diverse experience allowed us to fully learn about the tea ceremony culture and traditional spirit of Japan.
